Take deliberate step to integrate young people and women into governance space.

We urge the Regional and Economic Commissions and the AU to:

1. Take deliberate step to integrate young people and women into governance space, provide them with Agro-ecology education and create agro-related jobs and employment opportunities for them as a way to improve on Africa's food production capacity and security thus ensuring the attainment of Food Sovereignty in the near future.
2. Ensure that the new decade on Economic and Financial inclusion focus on the liberalisation of access to resources and development of appropriate legal mechanism and safety net that protect women involvement in food production, processing and marketing activities;

Protect the livelihood and income of women in rural area from the negative effect of climate change.

3. Develop appropriate administrative measures to implement specific articles within the Maputo Protocol and Maputo Declaration relating to the food security and nutrition of women and set up a 5-year National Accountability Mechanism for the review of nutritional status of women;
4. Review the existing conflict management framework to secure and protect women's access to food production resources during conflict and also build the capacity of women in Agriculture in the use of Agro-related early warning and response system to prevent conflict and build sustainable peace;
5. Implement 2013 Resolution of the General Assembly of the United Nations on the Protection of Women Human Rights Defenders especially as it relates to Defender of Women's land rights across the continent
6. Put in place a mechanism that protects the livelihood and income of women in rural area from the negative effect of climate change, contract farming and privatization of Africa's Agricultural system;

7. Adopt a human-centred food systems approach and adhere to international commitments and obligations such as Sustainable Development Goal 2 with a special focus to health rights and right to food for women and girls including those in vulnerable situations;
8. Intensify continental, regional and national efforts to ensure that all school land is secured with appropriate title deeds which allowed the school to invest in the land for food production while Governments should support, scale up school feeding programs through adequate national budgetary allocations to ensure its sustainability;
9. Adopt deliberate policies that invest in a healthy future of the continent through transforming the negative cultural norms that inhibit ownership, access and participation of young women and girls to land and agribusiness opportunities, increase household food security and thus eliminate practices such as child marriage.
10. Devote more attention and resources towards understanding and reducing time poverty by investing in basic Amenities such as primary health care that reduces heavy UCDW to promote psychological, economic and nutritional well-being of women.
